Welcome

A welcome from the Phillip Island Nature Parks Chief Executive Officer, Catherine Basterfield.

Womin jeka (Welcome) from Phillip Island Nature Parks CEO Catherine Basterfield

We are extremely proud to share our Island home with you and showcase its natural beauty, special wildlife and world-class visitor experiences. We pay our respects to Phillip Island's Traditional Custodians, the Bunurong People, and are committed to our shared journey of understanding and caring for Country together.

The Nature Parks team takes the responsibility of protecting our island haven very seriously - ensuring we can contribute to Victoria's biodiversity through ongoing management and restoring threatened species. We value the relationships we have with our partners in helping us to achieve our conservation goals. I would encourage you to lend your support to this important symposium which provides an invaluable forum for knowledge sharing and making a real difference to island landscapes and their people across our region.

2021 THEME

Partnering for land, sea and coast

Partnering for land, sea and coast has been selected to recognise the significance of partnerships that effectively manage the natural and cultural values of islands, surrounding seas and coasts.

It seeks to highlight the leading role of Traditional Custodians and Community Groups in island, sea and coastal management. Through joint efforts and shared understanding the environmental, cultural, social, and economic values of islands can be protected.

The ISLAND ARKS SYMPOSIUM VII brings together scientists, researchers, conservationists, environmentalists and experts in their field to present a symposium like no other.

OUR UNITED PURPOSE

The Island Arks Symposium VII is a well-recognised event around Australia, New Zealand and other parts of the Pacific Ocean and is expected to attract approximately 120 delegates.

The symposium is a targeted opportunity for Ranger teams, Traditional Custodians, community groups, practitioners, policy makers and scientists to explore the challenges, pathways and solutions to forging successful partnerships to manage island systems, and examine how the resilience of island systems can be enhanced in a changing world.

Millowl (Phillip Island) will host the 2021 Symposium, bringing great opportunity to showcase local conservation, tourism and wildlife organisations.

Your presence at, and support of Island Arks Symposium VII is a much-appreciated demonstration of your commitment to preserving our island environments.
